Old Master Drawings

THE AUCKLAND CITY ART GALLERY
September-October 1960
FOREWORD

THIS EXHIBITION of old master drawings is drawn from the collection of 3,500 drawings collected by Sir Robert Witt, and bequeathed by him to the Courtauld Institute of Art, University of London.

We are indebted to the Institute's Director, Sir Anthony Blunt, for the generous loan of these drawings and for his introduction.

We are also very grateful to Mr Philip Troutman, Keeper of the Collection, for his notes on the drawings and for the trouble he has taken over their dispatch.

P.A.T.
Drawings do not carry the same publicity value as paintings. They do not fetch the same colossal prices, and even the most celebrated of them do not hang in reproductions in every home like the great masterpieces of painting. But they can often tell us things about artists that we cannot learn from his finished paintings. They are a more intimate outpouring of his personality, and they may record some facet of his thought or feeling which reflection caused him to eliminate in the finished work of art. Drawings let us in not only to the studio of the artist, but in some ways to the workings of his mind. They let us see his first reaction to a subject, or they allow us to watch him in the process of creation.

Drawings are of many types and are used for many purposes. They may embody the perception of an effect in nature which has to be seized almost instantaneously; they may be the result of a careful study of a deliberately posed model to be used in a big composition; or they may be finished drawings intended to be complete in themselves.

All these types and most of the intermediate categories are represented in the present exhibition, but it is not always easy to say to which group a particular drawing belongs. The Constable sketches, for instance, were certainly done either in front of nature or from a precise memory of a particular moment, but the Turner, though based on an equally intimate knowledge of nature, was certainly executed in the studio, mainly from imagination. The drawings by Claude Lorraine seem to be an intermediate category. We know that he drew from nature, but there is good reason to think that even drawings such as the two views of Rome were probably executed in the studio on the basis of more rapid sketches made on the spot.

Portrait drawings, like those of Lawrence and Romney, again vary in their function. The Lawrence is a finished work, certainly not intended to be developed into an oil painting, whereas the Romney is a first jotting, probably made in the absence of the sitters, to establish a general grouping for the portrait.

Most of the Italian drawings are studies for religious or allegorical compositions. A number of these are projects for the general design; others, like the Domenichino, are studies from the model, made as a preparation for a detail of a big picture. Guercino and other seventeenth century artists certainly made figure studies, possibly from nature, possibly from imagination, for their own sake, and in fact many of Guercino's most brilliant and attractive works are of this kind. Castiglione and Pietro della Croce carried the idea still further, though in different ways. Castiglione invented a peculiar technique by which he could produce rapidly and cheaply a drawing which had the qualities of an oil sketch on wood or canvas. Pietro della Croce aimed at a much more finished effect, perhaps having in mind that his drawings might be engraved.

The range of subjects to which drawings could be applied was even wider than this. Callot and Stefano della Bella used the technique to record groups of figures from the life which they saw around them either in Florence or in Nancy. A century later Canaletto shows us two Venetians seen no doubt in the Piazza, and about the same time Pier Leone Ghezzi exploits the technique for caricature, a favourite game in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. At the other extreme Giulio Romano and Piranesi apply the medium to the problem of decorative design.

It was one of the purposes of the late Sir Robert Witt, who formed the collection from which these drawings come, to illustrate the variety of ends to which the art of drawing could be applied and also to show how important they could be as documents for the art historian through being either signed or dated or connected with known works by the artists. It is our hope in lending these drawings that some part of the pleasure and the knowledge which he intended to spread will be conveyed to those who will see them in Auckland.

HISTORICAL NOTE

Chronologically, the exhibition starts with Italian artists in the first half of the sixteenth century who were associated with Raphael's studio in Rome, like Giulio Romano, Barrocci and da Carpi. The sculptor Bandinelli was their contemporary in Florence.

In the latter half of the century while Venice maintained its position with artists like Tintoretto and Palma, Bologna became more and more the main centre of influence through the Carracci. However, Rome with its massive building and decorating programme implemented by successive Popes, attracted both the Carracci and other Bolognese masters like Domenichino and Guercino. Then in the seventeenth century Rome became the greatest source of artistic activity. Not only did master designers like Pietro da Cortona work there, but also foreigners like the Frenchman Claude, the Flemish painter Bril and the German Elsheimer, all three being major influences in the development of landscape painting. During the same century and well into the eighteenth Venice regained some of its old reputation through the Tiepolos and Piazzetta.

Nearly all the Dutch and Flemish artists worked in the Netherlands on its characteristic subjects, genre, landscape and seascape. But artists like Heemskerck and Cort worked as engravers in Italy and their art was influential on the contemporary Italian printmakers.

The seventeenth and eighteenth centuries witnessed an ever-growing traffic of artists through all the countries of Europe. Thus in England, Lely and Kneller arrived and stayed to paint portraits, Canaletto to paint views of London, and Willem van der Velde to paint seascapes.

In France, during these centuries, under a powerful monarchy, building, decorating and commissions of all kinds provided endless employment for artists like Caron and Boucher, with designs for tapestries and mural paintings, while Germany and Spain employed the Tiepolos for similar large schemes.

During the eighteenth century the Rococo style hid under its decorative surface a real interest in nature, which later blossomed into the Romantic Movement — this romantic attitude in various ways caught up artists like Gainsborough, Blake, Fuseli, Constable, Delacroix and Turner.

From Giulio Romano's arrival in Mantua in 1524 to Turner's death in 1851, this exhibition describes the creative notes of artists in Europe.

3 VISIONARY HEAD OF SOLOMON
Pencil 255 x 215

Bought Parsons.
Coll: J. Linnell (from the artist).

The Linnell sale catalogue refers to three versions, of which this is one; the others are in the Huntington Library, California, and the Morris Wolf Collection, Philadelphia. Keynes (op. cit.) dates the drawing 'about 1819.' One of the heads which Blake drew from images which he called up, partly at the instigation of his friend John Varley, the water-colour painter, who was also interested in the occult.
JOHN CONSTABLE (1776-1837)

4 SEASCAPE
Pencil  110 x 140

Verso Two similar seascapes in lead pencil.

6 A WELL ON THE ROAD BETWEEN EAST BERGHOLT AND IPSWICH
Pen and greyish brown ink, greyish brown, grey and blue wash, over some lead pencil, on a light buff paper  191 x 156

Inscribed by the artist on the back of the drawing in pencil: Well on the Road from / E.B. to / Ips.ch done in / a gig by J.T.S. & / this is my copy from it. (That is, on the road from East Bergholt [Constable's birth-place] to Ipswich. 'J.T.S.' refers to John Thomas Smith, 'Antiquity' Smith, the author of Nollekens and his Times. In 1797 Smith published a series of etchings of picturesque cottages, entitled Remarks on Rural Scenery with Twenty Etchings of Cottages from Nature, and it was in that year that Constable first became acquainted with Smith, and submitted to him some drawings of cottages. This drawing seems to belong to 1797, and the inscription indicates that Smith made the journey from London to visit Constable in Suffolk.)
Bought Leggatt (n.d.).
Coll: F. White; Isabel Constable.
Exh: Oxford Arts Club 1937; Stafford Gallery 1939 (56).

The drawing passed through the Christie sale of 30 November 1892 (Lot 113), and the drawings in this sale came from the same source as those in the Isabel Constable sale at Christie's in June of the same year.

HENRY FUSELI (1741-1825)

7 TITANIA'S DREAM
Water-colour and drawing with point of brush over pencil  382 x 382

Bought Colnaghi.
Exh: Paintings and drawings by Fuseli; Roland, Browse, and Delbanco, 1948 (4); Arts Council, Fuseli, 1950 (132).
Dated 1 May 22 (1822), it is one of the latest drawings known by Fuseli.
A study for the painting sold in the Weill sale, Bollag, Zurich, 23/3/1933.

8 A LADY SEATED AT A SPINET — back view (traditionally said to represent Queen Charlotte)
Lead pencil, and some coloured wash (Top corners cut away) 459 x 299
Bought Rudolf (n.d.).
In the Nottingham Art Gallery is a very similar drawing by Fuseli, clearly representing the same sitter, in which the main difference is that another figure appears to the left.

THOMAS GAINSBOROUGH (1727-1788)

9 A ROAD THROUGH A WOOD, WITH TWO FIGURES ON HORSEBACK AND THREE ON FOOT (Plate 2b)
Black chalk and water-colour, varnished 220 x 305
Exh: Gainsborough Bi-centenary, Ipswich, 1927 (165); Gainsborough, Sassoon, 1936 (73); Amsterdam, 1936 (218); Country Life, 1937 (478); Paris, 1938 (201); V & A, 1943; British Council, Scandinavia, 1949-50; Bath, 1951 (58); Arts Council, 1951 (76); British Council, Paris, 1953 (50); repr. pl.11.

Black chalk, Indian ink wash, and white body colour 277 x 395
Exh: British Art, R.A., 1934 (1144), repr. souvenir, p.77; Gainsborough, Sassoon, 1936 (40); Worcester, 1938.
Inscribed in pen on back of mount Gainsbro.

11 LANDSCAPE — A WOODED SCENE, WITH A COUNTRY LANE
Lead pencil 215 x 283
Bought Christie, sale, 11 May 1928 (6) (as a study for the ‘Great Cornard Wood’).
Exh: Gainsborough Bi-centenary, Ipswich, 1927 (120; as a study for the ‘Great Cornard Wood’); Huddersfield, 1946; Arts Council, 1948, No.27 (as study for the ‘Great Cornard Wood’).
The drawing is not close enough to the ‘Great Cornard Wood’ (National Gallery, London), completed in 1748, to be certainly a study for the painting, but the scene is much the same, and the style is that of c.1748.

SIR PETER LELY (1618-1680)

12 PORTRAIT OF A MAN IN GARTER ROBES
Black chalk, heightened in white chalk, on blue paper. Much of the drawing has been rubbed away. The sheet made up on the left. 523 x 322.
No record of the provenance.
The drawing possibly belongs to a series of studies (another in the Witt Collection) made by Lely of the Knights, Officers and Prelates of the Order of the Garter. The series may have been conceived as part of an attempt to revive van Dyck's tentative plan to decorate Whitehall with the history and ceremony of the Order. (Cf. Arts Council Catalogue 1953 (23) for a fuller account.)

Coll: Benno Geiger.

Black, red and white chalk on blue paper  335 x 230
Verso Study of drapery, in black and white chalk.
Bought Colnaghi, 1938.

A study for the attendant in The Circumcision, painted for the Campagnia del Nome di Dio, Pesaro, and now in the Louvre.

LUCA CAMBIASO (1527-1585)

20 THE MARTYRDOM OF ST LAWRENCE
Bistre, pen and wash  244 x 355
The drawing, with its schematic, cube-like construction, is characteristic of Cambiaso's much imitated method.
Coll: St Cyr.

21 THE HOLY FAMILY AT THE FIRESIDE
Pen and brown ink, brown wash, on buff paper  236 x 174

Bought Colnaghi 1935.
Inscribed in ink bottom right Cambiaso
Inscription bottom centre erased and illegible

This group of a mother with her child on her lap, a man and another child, in an interior, would apparently be a genre representation of the Holy Family. Paintings by Cambiaso of the Holy Family or the Madonna and Child treated in a similar way are known, and this treatment of the subject was probably of important influence in Genoa (his home town) and North Italy, and in Spain, where he spent his last years. The drawing is less schematic than the Martyrdom of St Lawrence (No. 20), but a simplification based on the same approach is apparent.
ANTONIO CANALE called CANALETTO (1697-1768)

22 STANDING FIGURE OF A MAN IN CONTEMPORARY DRESS
Pen and bistre over slight black chalk drawing  302 x 175

Bought Sotheby, Chariette sale, 30 April - 1 May, 1923 (1) (as by Ghezzi).
Coll: Chariette (not in Lugt).
Exh: BFAC, 1927-8; Settecento, Venice, 1929; Matthiesen, 1939; V & A, 1943.
Repr: Ojetti, Il Settecento Italiano, 1932, fig.163.
Inscription by the artist 'voi ta'. On the verso a similar drawing of a man seen from behind and with the same inscription. These drawings are studies for the painting in Ottawa The Vegetable Market at San Giacomo di Rialto in Venice. Figure drawings by Canaletto are rare; there is a similar sheet in the Metropolitan Museum, New York, and two pages of figure studies in Berlin (repr. Hadeln, op. cit., pls. 62 & 63).

GIROLAMO DA CARPI (1501-1566 or 69)

23 DESIGNS FOR DECORATIVE MOTIFS IN RAPHAEL'S 'LOGGIE'
Pen and bistre  406 x 260

Coll: Baron de Triqueti (1804-1874) (Lugt 1304).
Exh: Decorative Arts of the Italian Renaissance, 1400-1600, Detroit, 1958-59 (17).
Originally attributed to Giovanni da Udine; attribution to Carpi due to Philip Pouncey.
The designs are related to designs actually carried out in the 'loggie' of the Vatican, Rome.

24 DESIGNS FOR ORNAMENTAL MOTIFS
Pen and bistre  355 x 247

Verso Similar designs.
Coll: Grahl (1791-1868) (Lugt 1199).
Bought at the Amherst of Hackney sale, Sotheby, 14 December 1921.
Possibly designs for ornamental motifs to be carried out in stucco as the drawing seems to suggest raised work. The general character of the designs suggests a connection with the type of decoration in the Villa Madama, Rome. The hand is clearly the same as that responsible for drawing No.23, and possibly again connects with work carried out under Raphael's supervision (Villa Madama ...).
Originally attributed to Perino del Vaga; later to Giovanni da Udine as by the same hand as No.23, and finally by Philip Pouncey to Girolamo da Carpi.
Exh: Decorative Arts of the Italian Renaissance, 1400-1600, Detroit, 1958-59 (16).

AGOSTINO CARRACCI (1557-1602)

26 LANDSCAPE WITH THE REST ON THE FLIGHT
Pen and brown ink  240 x 270

28 A RUSTIC SCENE, INCLUDING A WOMAN AND CHILD ON HORSEBACK AND OTHER FIGURES AND ANIMALS IN A LANDSCAPE
Brush drawing using a red earth paint and little medium  280 x 420
Bought Meatyard.
Exh: BFAC, 1937-8; Courtauld Institute, 1944.
A late drawing inscribed '4' at the top.

GIUSEPPI MARIA CRESPI (1665-1747)

29 MYTHOLOGICAL OR ALLEGORICAL COMPOSITION OF THREE FIGURES
Pen (or point of brush) and brown ink, brown wash, over red chalk. Laid down.  200 x 236
(Inscription on the back seems to read Gionima... (?!) — referring to the artist Antonio Gionima, to whom the drawing was attributed in the Christie sale.)
Bought Christie, Oppenheimer sale, July 1936, 80 (as by Antonio Gionima).
Coll: Benno Geiger; H. Oppenheimer.
Exh: Gernsheim 1937.
The subject has not been identified. The woman in the centre appears to be holding a pair of scales (Justice?); the figure on the right appears to be wearing a cap with feathers or wings (Mercury?); a wrongdoer (?) on the left. . .

Page Thirteen

A copy of the drawing by Lucas Vosterman, apparently made for Arundel, is in the British Museum.

Coll: Henry Reveley (1737-1798) (Lugt 1356).
The drawing was engraved in facsimile by C. M. Metz.

Possibly a design for the decoration of the vault of an apse — the curved line at the base of the drawing suggests this. All attention seems to be focussed upon the small angel holding the staff, but the subject is not identified (Adoration of...).
GIOVANNI BATTISTA PIRANESI (1720-1778)

43 THE TOMB OF THEODORIC AT RAVENNA

Both this and the present drawing show that Both quickly assimilated the Van Laer manner—or rather, as the drawing of _Peasants in the open_ signed and dated Rouen 1633 (Weimar) ... indicates, he brought with him to Rome an approach that could be readily adapted to the native life.’ (Both arrived Rome 1636; stayed to 1642.)_

Coll: (see 66)

This drawing and No.66 appear to be from the same sketch-book, from which other drawings are in the Royal collection at Windsor (Nos.26 to 31 in Blunt French Drawings at Windsor Castle, 1945). They were probably made in Florence 1617-19.

ANTOINE CARON (c.1520-1598)

Black chalk, pen and brown ink, light brown wash, white body colour heightening, on light buff paper.  327 x 482

71 A VIEW OF THE ARCH OF TITUS AND PART OF THE WALL OF THE VILLA FARNESINE IN ROME

(Plate 3a)

Pen and brown ink, and bistre wash, on blue paper, with some white heightening. 105 x 200

Coll: Esdaile (Lugt 2617); Bale (Lugt 640).

A page from the sketch-book.

The verso shows a standing figure of a man seen from behind, executed in pen, and a mediaeval town-wall, executed in pen and wash.

A number of drawings of the same size, and similar in technique and style, exist in private collections, and are variously ascribed to Claude Lorraine or Gaspar Dughet. One showing a view of the Tiber, traditionally attributed to Gaspar, is in the Witt collection.

72 STUDY OF A TREE

Pen and brown wash, white body (now discoloured), on blue paper. 186 x 112

Coll: de Fries (Lugt 2903); Lawrence (Lugt 2445); Esdaile (Lugt 2617).

A record reads that this was one of the 150 drawings from the de Fries collection chosen in 1820 by Sir Thomas Lawrence for his collection. The drawing subsequently passed through the Esdaile sale of 30 June 1840 (5th part of the sale), London (drawings by Claude and Titian acquired from Lawrence).

The discoloration of the white body gives an impression of a tree in blossom. The white body-colour has in part turned pink and in part completely grey. Possibly only high lights are intended; at least there was not originally a pink colour.

73 VIEW OF ROME, WITH THE TIBER

Bistre, pen and wash, on blue paper. 105 x 205

Coll: Wrest Park; Lucas; Oppenheimer.

A page from a sketch-book (see No.69).

The quality of some of these drawings, apparently all by the same hand and from the same sketch-book (or same series of sketch-books), suggests that Claude Lorraine was responsible. The drawing closely relates to drawing No.69.

The verso shows a standing figure of a man, drawn with the point of the brush.

JEAN BAPTISTE GREUZE (1725-1805)

74 A GENRE SCENE (THE RETURN FROM THE HUNT?)

Brush and grey wash  210 x 328

Acquired Konstantinoff, Paris (n.d.).

On the back of the paper on which the drawing is mounted is the inscription première pensée pour son tableau and J. B. Greuze

A study for some anecdotal painting. The subject has not been identified or connected with any painting by Greuze, but the inscription suggests a painting once existed. Another drawing of a very similar type is in Frankfort, and possibly represents another episode from the same story.
JEAN AUGUSTE DOMINIQUE INGRES (1780-1867)

75 STUDY FOR A FIGURE OF FAME
Lead pencil  237 x 161

Bought Drey (n.d.).
The sheet marked with the stamp of the artist's sale (Lugt 1477).
A study for the figure of Fame crowning Napoleon in the 'Apotheosis of Napoleon I' (Louvre) which was painted by Ingres in 1853 for a ceiling in the Hotel de Ville, Paris.

EUSTACHE LESUEUR (1617-1655)

76 STANDING FIGURE OF A CARthusIAN, AND A STUDY FOR THE COWL OF THE SAME FIGURE
Black chalk, white chalk heightening, on buff paper. Squared with stylus for enlargement. 427 x 249

Bought Rudolf (n.d.) with others of the same series (Witt Nos.1882-97).
This drawing and the others of the series, bound in one volume, passed through a sale 1887.

One of a series of drawings of single figures of Carthusians, of which others are in the Witt collection and the Louvre, Paris, connected with Lesueur's great work, the decoration of the Cloister of the Chartreux in Paris, with scenes depicting the Life of St Bruno (the paintings now in the Louvre), 1645-47. The same figure appears on the Witt drawing No.1893; the present squared drawing makes the silhouette more interesting.

CHARLES PARROCEL (1688-1752)

77 A CAVALRYMAN
Black and white chalk, on light brown paper. 416 x 270

Bought Maison, February 1955 (Witt Bequest).

JEAN FRANCOIS DE TROY (1679-1754)

78 STANDING FIGURE OF A MAGISTRATE
Black chalk, heightened in white chalk, on a greenish grey (originally blue?) paper. 514 x 301
